Course Description:

English 201C, English Composition: Critical Thinking presents an advanced composition course beyond ENGL 201A which emphasizes critical thinking, including reasoning, rhetoric, reading, and information fluency in order to develop argumentative skills for diverse contexts and audiences.

Student Learning Outcomes

1. I can identify rhetorical appeals (such as logos, ethos, and pathos) and evaluate their relative effectiveness in arguments.
2. I can identify fallacies (such as slippery slope, appeal to pity, and personal attack) and the effects they have on an argument's persuasiveness.
3. I can differentiate between inferences, facts, and judgments.
4. I can differentiate between inductive and deductive reasoning and evaluate their use in argumentative essays.

5. I can write argumentative and analytic essays that are clear, organized, and persuasive. That is, they employ a strong thesis, logical and substantial evidence, and other essential rhetorical skills.
